Federal law provides that a cardholder has no liability for unauthorized use of his/her credit card unless all of the following four conditions are met. If the card issuer (1) has notified you of your limited liability (2) has provided you with adequate means to notify you of the credit loss (3) has provided means of identifying the authorized user; and if (4) the unauthorized use occurred before the card issuer is notified then your liability is limited to $50 per card. The liability on debit or cash machine cards is up to $500 per card depending upon various conditions. It is a policy of some credit card issuers not to hold card members liable in any event.
